The Carver Policy Governance Guide is the definitive resource for understanding and implementing the Policy Governance Model. This comprehensive guide provides a detailed overview of the model's key principles, its benefits, and the role of the board in its successful implementation.

Key Principles of the Policy Governance Model

The Policy Governance Model is based on a few key principles that distinguish it from traditional board governance models:

- The board's primary responsibility is to set policy. The board is not responsible for managing the day-to-day operations of the organization. Instead, it should focus on setting clear and concise policies that provide direction to the CEO and staff.
- The board should delegate authority to the CEO. The CEO is responsible for implementing the board's policies and managing the day-to-day operations of the organization. The board should delegate sufficient authority to the CEO to carry out these responsibilities effectively.
- The board should hold the CEO accountable for results. The board should regularly review the CEO's performance and make sure that the organization is achieving its goals. If the CEO is not meeting expectations, the board should take appropriate action.

Benefits of the Policy Governance Model

The Policy Governance Model has been shown to provide numerous benefits for organizations, including:

- Improved board effectiveness. The Policy Governance Model provides a clear framework for board decision-making and accountability. This helps to improve the board's overall effectiveness and efficiency.

- Increased organizational performance. By setting clear and concise policies, the board can help to improve organizational performance and achieve its goals.
- Reduced risk. The Policy Governance Model helps to reduce risk by ensuring that the board is focused on the most important issues and that the CEO is held accountable for results.

The Role of the Board in the Policy Governance Model

The board plays a critical role in the Policy Governance Model. The board's responsibilities include:

- Setting policy. The board's primary responsibility is to set policy. This includes developing a mission statement, strategic plan, and policies that govern the organization's operations.
- Delegating authority to the CEO. The board should delegate sufficient authority to the CEO to implement the board's policies and manage the day-to-day operations of the organization.
- Holding the CEO accountable. The board should regularly review the CEO's performance and make sure that the organization is achieving its goals. If the CEO is not meeting expectations, the board should take appropriate action.
- Ensuring compliance. The board is responsible for ensuring that the organization complies with all applicable laws and regulations.
- Protecting the organization's assets. The board is responsible for protecting the organization's assets and ensuring that they are used for the benefit of the organization.

How to Implement the Policy Governance Model

Implementing the Policy Governance Model can be a challenging process, but it is well worth the effort. The following steps can help you to successfully implement the model in your organization:

- Get buy-in from the board. The first step is to get buy-in from the board. This means educating the board about the Policy Governance Model and its benefits. You should also make sure that the board is committed to implementing the model.
- Develop a transition plan. Once the board has bought into the Policy Governance Model, you need to develop a transition plan. This plan should outline the steps that you will take to implement the model.
- Train the board and staff. Once you have developed a transition plan, you need to train the board and staff on the Policy Governance Model. This training should cover the key principles of the model, the board's role, and the CEO's role.
- Implement the Policy Governance Model. Once the board and staff have been trained, you can begin to implement the Policy Governance Model. This should be a gradual process, and you should make sure to monitor the progress of the implementation.

The Policy Governance Model is a powerful and effective framework for board governance. By implementing the model, organizations can improve board effectiveness, increase organizational performance, and reduce risk.
