Marriage is a universal human institution. It has been practiced in every culture and every era of history. Marriage is a way for two people to come together and create a family. It is a way to provide stability and support for children. Marriage is also a way to express love and commitment.

Divorce is the legal dissolution of a marriage. Divorce is a relatively new phenomenon. It was not until the 19th century that divorce became widely available. Divorce rates have increased dramatically in recent decades. In the United States, the divorce rate has doubled since the 1960s.

There are a number of factors that have contributed to the rise in divorce rates. These factors include:

- The increased economic independence of women

The no-fault divorce laws have made it much easier to get divorced. In the past, people had to prove that their spouse was at fault in order to get a divorce. This is no longer the case. Now, people can get a divorce simply by stating that they are no longer happy in the marriage.
