Clover is a master of language, and his poems are full of vivid imagery and insightful observations. In "The Ballad of the Twittering Machine," he describes the way that social media can create a sense of community, but also how it can be used to spread misinformation and hatred.

"The Twittering Machine, it sings and it tweets,

It tells us the news, it tells us the beats,

It tells us the lies, it tells us the cheats,

And we, we listen, we listen, we believe."

In "The Ballad of the YouTube Star," Clover explores the way that social media can create a sense of fame and fortune, but also how it can be used to exploit and commodify people.

"The YouTube Star, she's so beautiful and bright,

She makes us laugh, she makes us cry,

She makes us want to be just like her,

But we don't know the price she pays."

Clover's poems are not just about the negative aspects of the digital age. He also explores the ways in which technology can be used for good. In "The Ballad of the Open Source Software," he celebrates the way that open source software can be used to create a more just and equitable world.

"The Open Source Software, it's free and it's fair,

It's made by the people, for the people,

It's not owned by any one company,

And it's not controlled by any one government."

Roadrunner Singles is a challenging and thought-provoking collection of poems that offers a unique perspective on the digital age. Clover's poems are full of insights and observations, and they are sure to stay with you long after you finish reading them.
